

Think in Sync

A quick and simple way to get your team aligned

For teams that:

- Are struggling with cohesion and understanding each other
- Are trying to overcome barriers to effectiveness, like working virtually
- Feel a sense of frustration where people are not feeling heard
- Would benefit from having a coaching session
- Want to be more effective but lack the know-how
- Have 2-4 hours to invest

What you can expect:

- A fun way to embrace your differences and their potential
- Solutions for turning mind-traps into levers for thinking in sync
- A simple map that explains so much for each member and the group
- Only takes 2 hours for your team to get rolling
- Group size: 3-25 people

How it works: from individual to group awareness

INDIVIDUAL SURVEY AND REPORT

A shared awareness of how people think leads to a common understanding. This opens the way for more meaningful interactions and learning how to think in sync with each other. Every team member takes the MindTime survey which provides a clear explanation of how they each think (scientifically validated) and prepares them for understanding the group map.

DIAGNOSTIC AND SOLUTIONS SESSION

After everyone has taken the survey and the team has been mapped, John uses 4 simple thought-hacks to reveal your team's dynamics and what's possibly out of sync. This is done by either a 90-minute live webinar or a 45-minute pre-recorded video, and is based on the team's composition as revealed by the MindTime map.

RESOURCES TO MAKE IT STICK

Nothing sticks without practice. MindTime skills are sticky and easily implemented into daily group routines and processes. We provide you with access to resources like our community Slack channel where your questions are answered by coaches. You also gain access to other supporting materials such as the e-book It's All About Time.
